Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing in reference to Kristen Clanton. I first came to know Kristen in 2005 at Borders Books in Tampa, Florida. When I first met Kristen, I was one of her supervisors. As an employee, Kristen is punctual, hard-working, and organized. Her work ethic is one of her most admirable qualities. On a more personal level, I immediately found Kristen to be smart and likeable, and I knew that we would be very good friends.
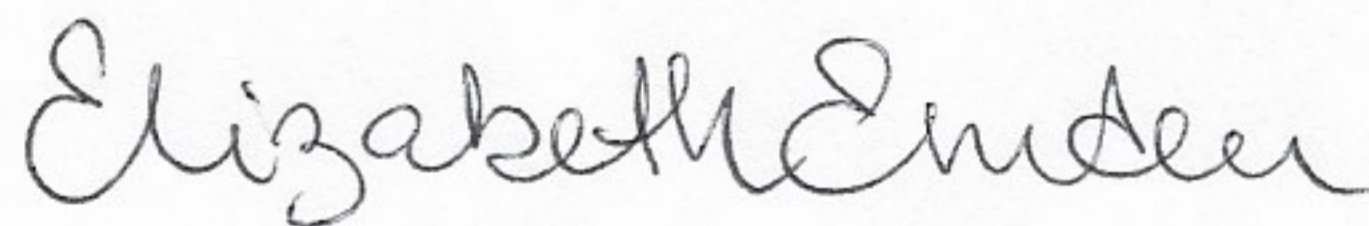

Over the years, Kristen has been one of my closest, most trusted friends. You would be hard pressed to find a more genuine and more loyal person. For over a decade, I have confided in Kristen, gone to her for advice, and sought her opinion on important matters. She is reliable, honest, and gracious. It is not surprising that Kristen is well liked by everyone who knows her.

As I mentioned previously, Kristen's work ethic is something to be commended. For as long as I have known Kristen, she has always been diligent in her commitment to bettering herself while simultaneously being dedicated to her job. She has worked tirelessly to obtain several degrees, while working to support herself, and pursuing her passions. Every time I learn about a new goal Kristen has achieved, whether it is writing, publishing, teaching, editing, or any of the other notable things she does, I wonder how it is possible for someone to be so successful and make it look so easy. She truly is an impressive individual.

Kristen's dedication to her education and career are only matched by her dedication to her family and friends. I consider myself lucky to have such an intelligent, capable, and well-rounded friend, and any place of employment would be equally lucky to have her as an employee.

If you have any questions or would like to speak further about Kristen's many attributes, please feel free to contact me.

Sincerely,

Elizabeth Emden
